CCAM Program Inventory

Reference Guide

With 132 programs from across the Federal government eligible to fund transportation, the Coordinating Council on Access and Mobility \(CCAM\) Program Inventory can be used in many ways to help find programs that may provide funding for your transportation needs. Below are recommendations to help navigate the inventory and examples of its use in practice.

CCAM Program Inventory: Use Case Example

Looking for a Federal program that can purchase a vehicle that members of your community can use to access local services?

Or maybe multiple Federal funding sources that can buy transit fares or vouchers to get community members to their appointments?

Try the steps below to help find the right Federal support for your transportation goals.

1

In the “Program Inventory” tab, navigate to the Eligible and/or Required Transportation Activities section.

2

Click on the ▼ in the column header and select “Yes” to find the programs that may provide funding for the transportation expense.

3

To help further narrow the search, you can filter the data by “Primary Direct Recipient.” This will help determine who may be eligible for funding.

4

Once the most relevant programs are identified, filtering by “Incoming” and “Outgoing” Federal Fund Braiding will help determine if multiple funding streams may be used to pay for an eligible transportation expense.

This process can be used for each of the inventory’s data elements and will help users find programs that meet their specific transportation needs.

CCAM Program Inventory: Community Examples

- 1) Needing help getting to volunteer opportunities in his community, a retired educator worked with his local AmeriCorps Seniors office to research additional funding sources included in the CCAM Program Inventory. Together, funding from AmeriCorps and the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) allowed the educator, as well as other local seniors, to continue volunteering in their community (Source).
- 2) A clinic in the Mississippi Delta needed Federal funding to provide essential transportation services for members of their community. The clinic identified two Federal grant programs at U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and DOT that allowed for their respective funds to be combined. The fund braiding arrangement helped the clinic provide essential transportation services in their community (Source).

1. Introduction to Federal Fund Braiding for Local Match

In 2018, the Coordinating Council on Access and Mobility (CCAM) conducted focus groups and listening sessions across the country to capture what State and local stakeholders perceived to be the most prominent barriers to local human services transportation coordination. Stakeholders, particularly those serving rural areas, consistently stated that fulfilling the match requirement for Federal grant programs is a challenge that impacts their ability to provide transportation. In some cases, potential Federal grantees reported canceling transportation projects altogether because they were unable to obtain the required match funds and thus could not receive Federal funding. Several participants stated that the ability to use Federal program funds to fulfill other Federal programs' match requirements ("Federal fund braiding for local match") would enable them to provide and coordinate transportation.

Section 200.306(b) of Title 2, Code of Federal Regulations, prohibits Federal fund braiding for local match "except where the Federal statute authorizing a program specifically provides that Federal funds made available for such program can be applied to matching or cost sharing requirements of other Federal programs."¹

The CCAM conducted Program Analysis Working Sessions in 2024 and 2025 with several Federal CCAM sub-agencies to clarify and document which Federal programs' statutes expressly provide this authorization. Based on the input from each participating agency, this guide defines Federal fund braiding for local match and program eligibility to enable Federal agencies and Federal grant recipients to more effectively manage Federal funds and coordinate human services transportation.

Definition of Federal Fund Braiding for Local Match

Federal fund braiding for local match, also referred to as Federal fund braiding, is when funds from one Federal program are used to meet the match requirements of another. The term "braiding" describes multiple independent funding streams coming together to fund a single project. These Federal funding "strands" never lose their identity and grantees report to both participating agencies regarding how specific funds are spent. Though the phrase "Federal fund braiding" sometimes refers to other arrangements, this guide uses the phrase exclusively in the context of Federal fund braiding for local match.

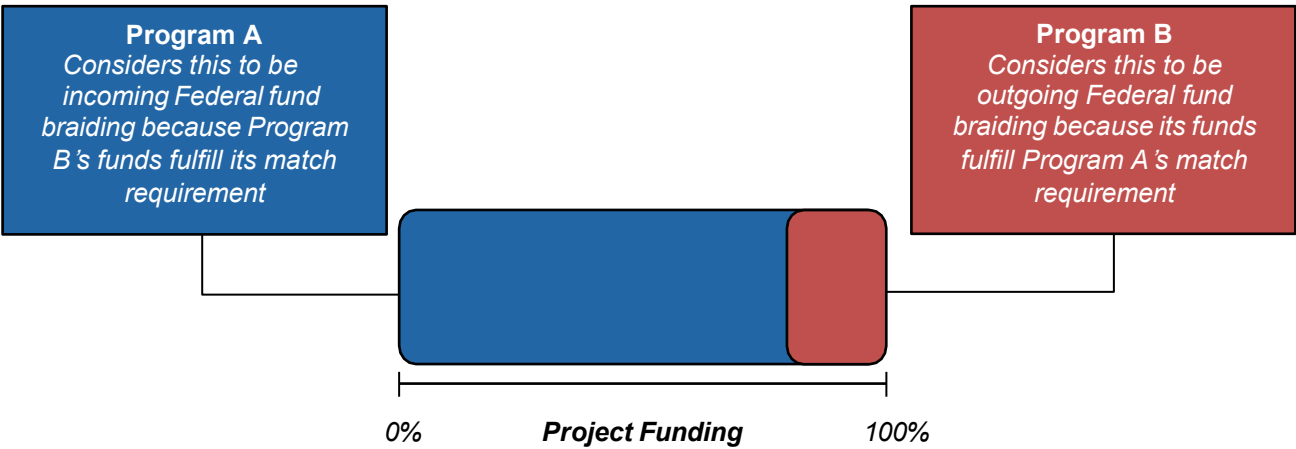

Funds eligible for Federal fund braiding can be categorized into two types: incoming and outgoing. A program considers a Federal fund braiding arrangement to be incoming when another Federal program's funds fulfill its match requirement in order to fund a single transportation project. A program considers a Federal fund braiding arrangement to be outgoing when its funds fulfill the match requirements of another Federal program in order to fund a single transportation project.

Consider the case where Program A contributes 80 percent of a project's cost and Program B fulfills the match requirement of Program A by contributing the remaining 20 percent of the project's costs. Program A considers this arrangement to be incoming Federal fund braiding because another program's funds are "coming in" to fulfill its match requirement. Program B considers this arrangement to be outgoing Federal fund braiding because its funds are "going out" to fulfill another program's match requirement. Grantees still need to fulfill Program B's match requirement, if applicable. For example, this may mean that Program A funds 80 percent of the project cost,

¹ There are two sides to cost-share from a transactional perspective: the program receiving the cost share, and the program(s) contributing the cost share. In general, if either the receiving or contributing program statute provides specific authorization related to using Federal funds as cost share from, or for, other federal programs, it would be allowable (at least absent an express prohibition on using federal funds as a cost share in the other applicable program statute). Affirmative statutory authorization would need to be identified in one statute or the other to overcome the default prohibition against this practice under U.S. Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) cost principles in 200.403(f). (Provided by OMB Deputy Controller, Office of Federal Financial Management on 10/11/2024)

Program B funds 15 percent, and the grantee funds the remaining 5 percent with local funds in order to fulfill Program B’s match requirement. The figure below depicts the flow of incoming and outgoing funds for this example project.

2. Federal Fund Braiding Information for Grantees

A project that receives funds from multiple Federal programs must meet all requirements of the participating Federal agencies, including eligibility requirements, reporting requirements, regulatory requirements, statutory requirements, and program guidance.

Potential grantees should first verify that their prospective project meets both Federal programs’ eligibility requirements. For example, any program funds used to fulfill the match requirement of another program must fund a transportation project or activity that is eligible under both programs and benefits both programs’ grantees.

Potential grantees should then confirm whether the two Federal programs from which they would like to receive funds may participate in Federal fund braiding. The individual program webpages should be consulted. If the two programs allow Federal fund braiding, the potential grantee would likely be able to apply for both sources of funds as long as they meet all other requirements, such as reporting requirements. Potential grantees should confirm with both programs’ program managers to confirm that applicability has not changed.

If it is unclear whether one or both Federal programs may participate in Federal fund braiding, then potential grantees should contact the program managers at the relevant Federal agencies for assistance in making a determination.

While the information in this guide is accurate as of publication, legislative or regulatory changes may affect programs’ Federal fund braiding eligibility. Grantees should confirm with the appropriate Federal agency that Federal fund braiding is allowable before braiding funds.

3. Federal Fund Braiding Information for Federal Agencies

The following two decision trees summarize the basic questions that Federal agencies and their counsel must answer to determine if a program may participate in a potential Federal fund braiding arrangement. It is important to consider whether Federal fund braiding is theoretically and legally possible, not whether it has been done previously. Once a determination is made, the CCAM encourages the Federal agency to update the program website to clarify the issue for prospective grantees, as well as contact the CCAM (CCAM@dot.gov) so that broader CCAM materials may be updated.

Remember

In order to participate in Federal fund braiding, a project must meet all requirements of the participating Federal agencies, including:

- Eligibility requirements
- Reporting requirements
- Match requirements
- Regulatory requirements
- Statutory requirements
- Program guidance

4. CCAM Federal Fund Braiding Program Determinations

The table below lists program-by-program determinations on Federal fund braiding eligibility, as documented in the 2024 and 2025 CCAM Program Analysis Working Sessions. The information can also be found in the updated CCAM Program Inventory, which was published in May 2025 and identifies 132 Federal programs that are able to provide funding for human services transportation for people with disabilities, older adults, and/or individuals of low income. A project that receives funds from multiple Federal programs must meet all requirements of the participating Federal agencies, including eligibility requirements, reporting requirements, regulatory requirements, statutory requirements, and program guidance. The table below notes instances where a program may participate in Federal fund braiding if the other participating program's statute has express authority to allow Federal fund braiding. In these instances, the original program's statute is silent on whether it may participate in Federal fund braiding.
